The program teaches high school students to create games on the popular digital platform Roblox Studio, and is designed to provide the teen participants with the technology tools necessary to succeed in today's digital world.

Students work in collaborative teams, learning to think critically about the reasons behind the development of the games they choose to design, while also crafting the strategies necessary to overcome any obstacles they encounter during the development phase.

Upon successful completion, interested students are afforded an opportunity for employment teaching the course to students in subsequent programs, fulfilling The Loyalty Foundation's commitment to accessible tech education.
